NATIONAL DIOXIN EMISSIONS
FROM MEDICAL WASTE INCINERATORS

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This document provides estimates of the nationwide dioxin (i.e., polychlorinated dibenzo-p-dioxins and polychlorinated dibenzofurans) emissions from medical waste incinerators (MWI's) for three time periods: 1990, 1995, and 2002. The estimate of dioxin emissions in 1990 is representative of the nationwide dioxin emissions that occurred at the time when the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 were adopted. After 1990 several States implemented air emissions regulations that resulted in a reduction in the nationwide dioxin emissions from MWI's. Estimates of the nationwide dioxin emissions in 1995 that are included in this document were developed as part of EPA's development of new source performance standards (NSPS) and emission guidelines for new and existing MWI's. Estimates of the dioxin emissions in 2002 reflect the emissions reduction resulting from the implementation of the NSPS and emission guidelines for MWI's. Since the level of emission control for the NSPS and emission guidelines for MWI's has not been established, a range of estimates for dioxin emissions is presented for year 2002.

All three estimates of the nationwide dioxin emissions (1990, 1995, and 2002) were generated using a data base of existing MWI's and emission factors developed from available dioxin emissions data for MWI's. The tables in this document present nationwide dioxin emissions from MWI's in units of (1) grams per year toxic equivalent quantity (TEQ) and (2) grams per year total mass basis.

Year	National dioxin emissions from medical waste incinerators (MWI's), grams/yr
	TEQ basis	Total mass basis
1990	600	29,000
1995	150	7,200
2002	14 to 23[a]	660 to 1,100[a]

TEQ - 2,3,7,8-tetrachlorinated dibenzo-p-dioxin toxic equivalent based on 1989 international toxic equivalency factors.

[a]A range of emissions is presented for year 2002 because the final NSPS and Emission Guidelines for MWI have not been selected. The range presented represents the dioxin levels that would result from the implementation of the most likely alternatives that may be selected for the final NSPS and Emission Guidelines.

1.0 INTRODUCTION

This document provides estimates of the nationwide dioxin emissions from MWI's for 1990, 1995, and 2002 and the methodologies used to arrive at these dioxin emissions estimates. The 1990 estimate is representative of the nationwide dioxin emissions that occurred at the time when the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 were adopted. The 1995 estimate was developed for the MWI rulemaking and is used as a baseline precontrol estimate. The year 2002 estimate was developed to represent the future nationwide dioxin emissions after full compliance with the MWI NSPS and emission guidelines.

The EPA is currently evaluating the environmental and economic impacts of several regulatory options for the final NSPS and emission guidelines for MWI's. At this time no decision has been made on the final emissions reductions that will be applicable to MWI's. Therefore, a range of dioxin emissions estimates for the year 2002 is presented in this document. This range is based on the regulatory options that are currently under evaluation by the Agency.

The starting point for all three dioxin emissions estimates (1990, 1995, and 2002) is a 1995 inventory of existing MWI's, which includes for each MWI the location, the type (batch or nonbatch), and the design capacity. Sections 2.1 and 2.2 discuss the methodology used to determine the annual amount of waste burned at each facility in the inventory and level of air pollution control associated with each unit. The information in the inventory was combined with emission factors to arrive at the estimates of the nationwide dioxin emissions from MWI's in 1990, 1995, and 2002.

2.0 DATA USED IN CALCULATING ANNUAL DIOXIN EMISSIONS

The estimates of the nationwide dioxin emissions were developed based on an inventory of existing MWI's in 1995. The 1995 inventory was adjusted to create both a 1990 inventory and a year 2002 inventory. The information used to develop the inventories was taken from a number of sources including a listing of MWI's prepared by the American Hospital Association (AHA), State air permits gathered by EPA, and a survey of MWI's in California and New York conducted by EPA in 1995.[1] The AHA inventory was itself taken from two sources; an EPA "Locating and Estimating" document and a vendor listing. Once this information was compiled, the inventory was reviewed and modified based on updates from State surveys, commercial sources, and MWI vendors.[2,3] The final inventory is provided in Appendix A.

The capacity of each MWI was provided in the inventory. The capacities for the continuous and intermittent MWI's in the inventory were expressed in terms of an hourly charging rate in pounds per hour (lb/hr). Batch MWI capacities were provided in pounds per batch (lb/batch). Therefore, batch MWI's were evaluated separately from the continuous and intermittent MWI's and the batch capacities were not converted to hourly burning rates.

Also included in the inventory was the applicable State PM emission limit for each MWI. The AHA listing of MWI's and the State air permits included PM limits for each MWI. Where PM limits were not listed, limits were applied based on State regulatory requirements using the same methods described in the MACT floor analysis for the proposed standards.[4] As described in Section 2.2, PM limits could be used to estimate the type of emission control at MWI's for which the control was not identified for the MWI.

2.1 MWI OPERATING PARAMETERS

Nationwide MWI emissions were calculated by first calculating MWI emissions on a unit specific basis using the MWI inventory and considering unit specific parameters. Actual emission control data was used where available and was estimated when not available. In calculating emissions and estimating operating parameters, there are three distinct types of MWI's as follows: batch, intermittent, and continuous. The difference in these three MWI types is in the methods of charging waste to the MWI and removing ash from the primary chamber of the MWI. Continuous MWI's, which are the largest of the three types, have mechanical ram feeders and continuous ash removal systems. These features allow the unit to operate 24 hours per day for many days at a time. Most intermittent MWI's also have mechanical ram feeders that charge waste into the primary chamber. However, intermittent MWI's do not have an automatic ash removal system, and can only be operated for a limited number of hours before the unit must be shut down for ash removal. In batch MWI's, all of the waste to be burned is loaded into the primary chamber and, once the burning cycle begins, no additional waste is loaded. After the burn cycle for a batch unit is complete and the unit has cooled down, the ash is removed manually. In the inventory of existing MWI's used to estimate the nationwide dioxin emissions, a differentiation was made between batch and nonbatch (continuous and intermittent) MWI's. However, no differentiation was made between continuous and intermittent MWI's in the inventory.

The hours of operation were estimated for each MWI type in the inventory in order to determine the annual waste incinerated. The hours of operation were defined as the hours during which the MWI combusts waste.

For batch MWI's, it was estimated that a typical MWI charges waste 160 times per yr (i.e. 160 batches/yr; 3 batches per week).[5] The amount of waste burned each year in a batch unit and the yearly emissions produced depend primarily on the unit capacity and the annual number of batches. Because of this relationship, it was unnecessary to determine the actual hours of operation for batch MWI's.

For continuous and intermittent MWI's, operating hours were estimated for three size categories (≤500, 501 to 1,000, and >1,000 lb/hr). All MWI's with capacities less than 500 lb/hr were assumed to be intermittent MWI's.[6] The waste charging hours for intermittent MWI's with capacities less than 500 lb/hr were estimated at 1,250 hours per year (hr/yr). Since the inventory does not indicate whether an MWI is continuous or intermittent, a ratio of about 3 to 1, intermittent to onsite continuous, was used to estimate the hours of operation for onsite continuous and intermittent MWI's with capacities greater than 500 lb/hr.[7] The average operating hours for continuous MWI's in the 501 to 1,000 lb/hr size category was 2,916 hr/yr and the average charging hours for intermittent MWI's in this size category was 1,500 hr/yr. The weighted average of the charging hours for the combined continuous and intermittent MWI's was determined as follows:

$$(1{,}500 \text{ hr/yr} \times 0.77) + (2{,}916 \text{ hr/yr} \times 0.23) = 1{,}826 \text{ hr/yr}.$$

Large MWI's with design capacities greater than 1,000 lb/hr were estimated to operate 2,174 hr/yr and all commercial MWI's were estimated to operate 7,776 hr/yr. A summary of the waste charging hours for the continuous and intermittent MWI's is presented in Table 2-1.

A capacity factor represents the percentage of operational time a MWI has operated in 1 year. Capacity factors were calculated for each MWI size category based on the ratio of the actual annual charging hours to the maximum annual charging hours. For intermittent MWI's the maximum annual charging hours were estimated to be 4,380 hr/yr. This is based on 12 charging hours per day and 365 days per year because intermittent MWI's must shut down for daily ash removal. The maximum annual charging hours for continuous MWI's were estimated to be 8,760 hr/yr based on 24 charging hours per day and 365 days per year. All commercial MWI's were assumed to be continuous units.

TABLE 2-1. WASTE CHARGING HOURS FOR CONTINUOUS AND INTERMITTENT MWI'S

MWI capacity	Charging hours, hr/yr	Capacity factor, %
<500 lb/hr	1,250	29
501-1,000 lb/hr	1,826	33
>1,000 lb/hr	2,174	40
All commercial MWI's	7,776	89

Note: "Capacity factor" means ratio of tons of waste actually burned per year divided by the tons of waste that could be burned per year had the unit been operating at full capacity.

The maximum annual charging hours for onsite MWI's with capacities greater than 500 lb/hr were estimated to be 5,475 hr/yr, based on the 3 to 1 ratio of intermittent to onsite continuous MWI's discussed previously. The calculated capacity factors for each MWI size category are presented in Table 1.

Waste charging rates measured during emissions tests show the average hourly charging rates to be about two-thirds of the MWI design rates specified by incinerator manufacturers.[4] Therefore, waste was assumed to be charged at two-thirds of the MWI design capacity. Using the operating hours per year (or number of batches per year for batch units) and the corrected waste charge rate (two-thirds of the design rate), the amount of waste burned annually was determined for each MWI.

2.2 MWI EMISSION CONTROLS

As mentioned, actual emission control data was used where available and was estimated when necessary. When emission control system type was unknown it was estimated based on (1) the average PM emission rates for the different types of emission controls and (2) the PM limit to which the MWI is subject. For example, the average PM emission rate for intermittent and continuous MWI's with 1/4-sec combustion control was estimated from test data to be 0.30 gr/dscf.[9] Thus, any MWI with a PM emission limit greater than 0.30 gr/dscf was assumed to have a 1/4-sec combustion system. The PM emission limit ranges for all of the emission controls are shown in Table 2-2.

TABLE 2-2. CORRELATION BETWEEN PM EMISSION LIMITS AND ASSUMED EMISSION CONTROLS[9]

PM emission limit, gr/dscf at 7% O_2	Assumed level of emission control
Intermittent and continuous MWI's
≥ 0.3	1/4-sec combustion control
$0.16 \leq x < 0.3$	1-sec combustion control
$0.10 \leq x < 0.16$	2-sec combustion control
$0.015 < x < 0.10$	Wet scrubbers

$0.026 \leq x < 0.042$	2-sec combustion control
< 0.026	Wet scrubbers

2.3 MWI EMISSION FACTORS

An analysis of EPA-sponsored emission test data showed a direct relationship between the CDD/CDF emissions on a "total" dioxin basis and a "TEQ" basis. For total CDD/CDF emissions greater than 150 nanograms per dry standard cubic meter (ng/dscm), the ratio of total CDD/CDF emissions to TEQ emissions was 48:1. For total CDD/CDF emissions less than 150 ng/dscm, the ratio was 42:1.[10] These ratios were used with test data on total CDD/CDF emissions to develop TEQ emission factors for each type of emission control.[11] The resulting dioxin and TEQ emission factors are shown in Table 2-3.

TABLE 2-3. TOTAL DIOXIN AND TEQ EMISSION FACTORS[11]

Type of emission control	TEQ factors, lb TEQ dioxin/ lb waste	Dioxin factors, lb total dioxin/ lb waste
1/4-sec combustion control	3.96×10^{-9}	1.94×10^{-7}
1-sec combustion control	9.09×10^{-10}	4.45×10^{-8}
2-sec combustion control	7.44×10^{-11}	3.65×10^{-9}

3.0 METHOD OF CALCULATING ANNUAL EMISSIONS

This section presents the methods used to calculate the 1990, 1995, and 2002 nationwide dioxin emissions from MWI's.

In combination with the MWI parametric data, control technology data, and emission factors the following equation was used to calculate the annual dioxin emissions from each MWI in the MWI inventory:

$$\text{Emissions} = (C \times H \times C_1) \times F \times Q$$

where:

Emissions = Annual dioxin emissions, g/yr

C = MWI capacity, lb/hr

H = Charging hours, hr/yr

C_1 = ratio of waste charging rate to design capacity, 2/3

F = Emission factor for the appropriate level of control (lb dioxin/lb waste charged), and

Q = Conversion factor for pounds to grams, 453.6 grams/lb.

3.1 1990 ESTIMATES

The number of MWI's in each State as of 1990 was determined by first starting with the MWI's listed in the 1995 inventory and then adjusting it by adding MWI's that "shut down" in the 1990 to 1995 time period. The adjustment in MWI population occurred in States that adopted "stringent" MWI rules in the 1990-1995 time period that resulted in MWI closure because of economic considerations.

Table 3-1 shows the States that have adopted "stringent" air emissions regulations applicable to MWI's between 1990 and 1995. For the purposes of this study "stringent" regulations are those that require all sizes of MWI's to meet an emission limit of less that 0.08 grains per dry standard cubic foot (gr/dscf) of particulate matter (PM). A PM emission limit of less than 0.08 gr/dscf usually requires the retrofit of an add-on air pollution control device (APCD) which, because of costs, generally leads to a shut-down of MWI's.

TABLE 3-1. STATES THAT ADOPTED STRINGENT REGULATIONS FOR MWI'S AFTER 1990

State	Compliance date	Size	PM emission limit
California	1/92	>25 tons/yr	85-99% reduction (reasonable BACT)
New Mexico	4/7/92	<200 lb/hr 200-999 lb/hr >=1000 lb/hr	0.08 gr/dscf @ 12% CO_2 0.03 gr/dscf @ 12% CO_2 0.015 gr/dscf @ 12% CO_2
New York	1/1/92	Onsite Commercial	0.03 gr/dscf @ 7% O_2 0.015 gr/dscf @ 7% O_2
Oregon	1991	all	0.03 gr/dscf @ 7% O_2
Washington	1993	<250 tons/d >250 tons/d	0.03 gr/dscf @ 7% O_2 0.02 gr/dscf @ 7 % O_2
Wisconsin	1993	<200 lb/hr 200-999 lb/hr >=1,000 lb/hr >=50 tons/d	0.08 gr/dscf @ 7% O_2 0.03 gr/dscf @ 7% O_2 0.015 gr/dscf @ 7% O_2 (including condensibles) 0.015 gr/dscf @ 7% O_2

The greatest change in the nationwide dioxin emissions from MWI's between 1990 and 1995 is due to the shut-down of MWI's, and not from retrofit of air pollution control. In California, New Mexico, New York, Oregon, Washington, Wisconsin, Florida, and South Dakota, MWI shut-downs were experienced at most facilities that were operating in-State prior to 1990. These States will be referred to as "regulated" States throughout this section. All other States are referred to in this section as "unregulated" States. The "unregulated" States are those that either have not implemented "stringent" regulations on MWI's or that have not experienced many MWI shut-downs since 1990.

The number of MWI's in the unregulated States in 1990 was assumed to be the same as the number of MWI's in the 1995 inventory because the unregulated States are unlikely to have experienced shut-downs in the 1990-1995 time period. For the regulated States, the number of MWI's that existed in 1990 was estimated using information from MWI vendor and State listings of MWI's.[1,12-17]

The next step in calculating emissions was to determine the amount of waste burned in MWI's in 1990 for each State. For the unregulated States, the amount of waste burned in 1990 was assumed to be the same as the current amount of waste burned in 1995, which was obtained directly from the inventory. In each of the regulated States, the ratio of the 1990 number of MWI's to the 1995 number of MWI's was applied to the current total waste burned to obtain the 1990 total waste burned. For regulated States with no MWI's in the 1995 inventory, the 1990 amount of waste burned was approximated using the amount of waste burned from unregulated States with the same number of 1990 MWI's. In cases where there were no unregulated States with the same number of MWI's, the amount of waste burned in a regulated State not appearing in the inventory was approximated by summing the waste burned from several unregulated States, that together have the same number of 1990 MWI's as the regulated State.

Dioxin emission factors were applied to the 1990 total waste burned in each regulated State to obtain the 1990 emissions. The total mass dioxin emission factor used for this estimate was 2.56×10^{-8} lb dioxin/lb waste combusted, which is a weighted emission factor that accounts for continuous, intermittent, and batch MWI's of all sizes. This emission factor was developed by dividing the dioxin emitted yearly from each uncontrolled (i.e. no gas scrubber system) MWI in the current inventory by the total waste burned yearly in each uncontrolled MWI. Similarly, the TEQ emission factor that accounts for all sizes and types of uncontrolled MWI's used to estimate the 1990 TEQ emissions was 5.33×10^{-10} lb TEQ dioxin/lb waste combusted. Uncontrolled emission factors were used to predict the 1990 dioxin emissions because MWI's that have shut down due to regulations are likely to have been uncontrolled.

The sum of the 1990 emissions in the unregulated States was added to the sum of the 1990 emissions from the regulated States to obtain the nationwide 1990 dioxin emissions estimate.

3.2 1995 ESTIMATES

The same methodology used to calculate the 1990 dioxin emissions from MWI's was used to calculate the 1995 dioxin emissions. The unadjusted 1995 inventory of MWI's was the basis for the calculation the 1995 dioxin emissions. First, the dioxin emissions from the individual MWI's in the 1995 inventory were calculated by multiplying the annual amount of waste burned by the appropriate emission factor (lb dioxin/lb waste) from Table 3. Next, the annual dioxin emissions from each MWI in the inventory were summed to estimate the total 1995 nationwide dioxin emissions from MWI's.

3.3 2002 ESTIMATES

The 1995 inventory of MWI's was adjusted to develop the year 2002 nationwide estimates of dioxin. The year 2002 emissions estimates were developed under the assumption that all of the MWI's in the 1995 inventory either currently have required control systems or will retrofit the emission controls required to comply with the standards and guidelines by the year 2002. It was also assumed that any new MWI's constructed would offset any MWI's that close with no increase in emissions.

The EPA is currently evaluating the environmental and economic impacts of several regulatory scenarios for regulation of new and existing MWI's. Because the NSPS and emission guidelines for MWI's have not been determined, estimates of year 2002 nationwide dioxin emissions from MWI's were developed for two scenarios. The two regulatory scenarios discussed in this section are expected to achieve the range of possible dioxin emissions reduction of the regulatory options EPA is investigating. Using these two scenarios, a range of dioxin emission estimates was obtained for the year 2002.

The first scenario is based on the least stringent requirement envisioned for existing MWI's, which may require small MWI's, those burning less than 200 pounds of waste per hour (lb/hr), to meet emission limits associated with good combustion control. Medium sized (201 to 500 lb/hr) MWI's may also be required to meet emission limits associated with good combustion control. Large (>500 lb/hr) MWI's would have to meet emission limits associated with add-on scrubber systems under scenario one.

The second scenario used to estimate future dioxin emissions was that all MWI's would be required to meet emission limits associated with add-on scrubber systems. Also, under scenario two, healthcare facilities would be likely to separate their waste into the infectious and noninfectious portions. It is anticipated under scenario two that the infectious portion of the waste would be burned onsite or at a commercial incinerator. Both onsite MWI's and commercial MWI's would be required to meet emission limits associated with gas scrubber systems. The noninfectious portion of the waste is likely to be treated as municipal solid waste and be disposed of in a landfill or a municipal waste combuster. The disposal costs for municipal solid waste are much lower than the disposal costs for infectious waste. Therefore, under scenario two it is assumed that noninfectious waste will not be burned in MWI's and, as a result, there will be no dioxin emissions produced from the burning of noninfectious waste in MWI's.

For year 2002 dioxin estimates under scenario one, the emission factor appropriate for the anticipated level of air pollution control in year 2002 was multiplied by the current annual waste burned for each MWI in the inventory. For scenario two, 15 percent of the total annual waste stream was assumed to be infectious. The emission factor for the appropriate level of control was multiplied by the annual infectious waste burned in each MWI in the inventory. For the purposes of generating year 2002 dioxin estimates, add-on air pollution control was considered to be a high efficiency wet scrubber system for scenarios one and two. The highest approximation of the dioxin emissions in 2002 was obtained from scenario one and the lowest estimate was obtained using scenario two.

4.0 RESULTS/CONCLUSIONS

The 1990, 1995 and 2002 national dioxin estimates for MWI's are presented in Table 4-1. In 1990 when the Clean Air Act Amendments were adopted, the nationwide emissions from MWI's were approximately 600 g/yr (TEQ). Due to the implementation of stringent State regulations in some States, many MWI's have shut down since 1990. The closure of MWI's, among other factors, is the principal reason for the decrease in the nationwide dioxin emissions between 1990 and 1995. The 1995 dioxin emissions from MWI's are estimated to be 150 g/yr (TEQ). After full compliance with the NSPS and emission guidelines, the future dioxin emissions are estimated to range from 14 g/yr to 23 g/yr, depending on the level of air pollution control required. The nationwide dioxin emissions will have decreased by 96 to 98 percent from 1990 to 2002 as a result of implementation of State and Federal regulations for MWI's. After full compliance with the MACT based MWI guidelines and NSPS, which is anticipated around year 2002, the nationwide dioxin emissions may decrease by approximately 85 to 91 percent from the 1995 baseline.
