

Suspended or Revoked Third-Party Certifiers (TPCs) under Toxic Substances Control Act (TSCA) Title VI Program

Updated on 9/3/2019

Revoked TPCs: As of the effective date listed below, a TPC whose recognition has been revoked may not certify any products under the TSCA Title VI program until it has reapplied for recognition, and must immediately notify all panel producers to which it provides certification services of the revocation. Note that the process for revoking a TPC's recognition status is outlined under 40 CFR 770.7(e)(3).

Suspended TPCs: As of the effective date listed below, a TPC whose recognition has been suspended may not certify any products under the TSCA Title VI program for the duration of its suspension, and must immediately notify all panel producers to which it provides certification services of the suspension. The suspension period generally lasts for 90 days after the effective date noted in the list. If the TPC has not taken action(s) to address non-compliance with the TSCA Title VI program by this date, EPA may take action to revoke its recognition under the TSCA Title VI program. Note that the process for suspending a TPC's recognition status is outlined under 40 CFR 770.7(e)(3).

Affected Panel Producers: Affected panel producers using the certification services of a suspended or revoked TPC have 90 days to obtain the services of another EPA-recognized TPC. If the panel producer is not able to obtain the services of another EPA-recognized TPC within 90 days, the panel producer may request a 90-day extension from EPA. During the time the panel producer is seeking a new TPC, it must continue to comply with all other requirements of the TSCA Title VI program, including quality control testing. Affected panel producers may refer to 40 CFR 770.7(f)(2)(i) for more information.
