

Q&A

- Attendee: Have you considered using preprinted posters or cards, with pictures on them, to hand out at each station?
 - Joanne Larner: That is a good idea. If you know you are dealing with a population that does not understand English, anything that helps get that message across is good.
- U.S. Department of Homeland Security: Did the scruples have their hair removed once they were identified as having been exposed?
 - Joanne Larner: I do not actually know.
- U.S. EPA: Was there any idea of separating the ambulatory from the non-ambulatory, and having two separate decontamination lines? Maybe the line for the non-ambulatory would be designed differently, with changes to make it easier for them.
 - Joanne Larner: The design of the exercise was to see how emergency services deal with a mixed population. Additional work is needed to see how to deal with the non-ambulatory. It comes down to how many people are typically at the incident.
